

motion. Dr. J. U. Stephenson could not see the necessity of making an argument of this sort now and another debate when the bill comes up next Wednesday. If a special order was made, the matter would be taken up, he asked, why not dispose of it now? Mr. Jordan said it would be best to wait until Wednesday.

Mr. Cox said he would oppose giving precedence to any matter save finance and appropriation bills.

Nobody would be hurt if the Senate killed the bill after the House has passed it, said Mr. Lunsford.

Were the bill one to raise the salaries of the members, thought Mr. Meetez, there would be no dissenting vote as to taking it up out of its order.

Mr. Smith said that if left on the calendar, the bill would be reached about the Fourth of July.

RELICS OF MAINE ABOARD COLLIER

Vessel Reaches Washington Navy Yard After Struggle With Ice.

Washington, February 9.—After a hard struggle with the ice in Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River, the naval collier Apache, which was sent to the Washington Navy Yard last afternoon with a cargo of relics from the wreck of the old battleship Maine in Havana harbor.

Probably the most interesting of the relics is the steel monument of the vessel, which, by specific direction of Congress, is to be placed over the graves of the victims of the disaster in Arlington cemetery. The original monument, including the lighting top, weighed 13,000 pounds, and extended through the hull to the keel of the vessel. In its present state it comprises only that section of the monument from the main deck to a few feet above the lighting top, about forty feet. The weight of that section, including the lighting top, is about 10,000 lbs.

The mast itself is about two feet in diameter. The lighting top is about ten feet in diameter and was designed to accommodate six gunners operating rapid-fire guns. The mast was unloading at the navy yard and taken on a strong truck to Arlington cemetery in time for erection before the bodies of the dead of the Maine, whose bodies are to be transported from Havana on a battleship the latter part of March.

When the other relics were brought up on the Apache shall be unloaded at the navy yard or taken to the Philadelphia yard will be determined soon. The original plan was to take the Apache to the Philadelphia yard, but it is now believed that there are ample facilities for storage there.

None of the big ten-inch guns of the Maine are on the Apache. Outside of the mainmast and a few six-inch guns most of the relics of the Maine are comparatively small in bulk and weight. The cargo is a

FIFTY TELEGRAMS ARE READ TO JURY

Government Offers Them as Proof of Conspiracy Among Packers.

Chicago, February 9.—Fifty telegrams sent by Swift & Co. to their representatives in Eastern cities giving instructions in regard to the shipments and margins, when the government declares tend to show that prices were fixed at the Chicago offices, were read to the jury in the packers' trial to-day.

Many of the messages, although sent over the company's private wires, were in code and had to be deciphered by Lee M. Lester, assistant manager of the beef department.

Counsel for the defendants objected to the introduction of the telegrams, and Judge Carpenter allowed the government to put them in evidence.

One of the telegrams was the following: "The committee of the Chicago packers, consisting of Swift & Co., and one of the defendants. It reads:

"No. 1 Boston. For your information, expect about 200 head of Philadelphia this week, small plus New York and prospects improved best business and results next week. Very much disappointed indications Boston minus 50 to 70. Some cars already closed shipments to 90. Have reduced Boston shipments to 60 until. (Other points throughout country showing improved volume right at plus margins. Have you any suggestions?"

"CHARLES H. SWIFT."

"No. 1" was code for beef department.

Another telegram sent to New York and Philadelphia representatives of the company in July, 1910, read:

"Any house in your jurisdiction not getting cost for beef got after them. Get results asked. No. 1."

The defense succeeded in having the name of Charles H. Swift stricken from the telegram after it had been introduced, because there was no evidence that the typewritten signature was authorized.

Many of the messages were approved or signed by Francis A. Fowler, head of the beef department of Swift & Co., and a defendant in the case.

Another telegram introduced was addressed to the company's representative at Baltimore, and bore the date July 23, 1910, and read:

"We have regulated shipments to every point in your territory this week and expect good results. Swift & Co."

SAMUEL GOMPERS HELD IT AN INSULT

Labor Leader Resented Suggestion That He Tender an Apology.

MITCHELL IS DRAMATIC

Gives Way to Tears When He Reiers to Court's Summons on Christmas Eve.

Washington, February 9.—An impassioned criticism of the action of Justice Taft in imposing sentence on the labor leader, Samuel Gompers, was made to-day by John Mitchell, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, during the cross-examination on his testimony in defense of the charge that he is guilty of contempt of court.

Mr. Mitchell testified that he is a soldier, and occupies no inconspicuous place among his countrymen, and saw no reason why he should be asked into court for sentence on the eve of Christmas. He declared he had been able to render some service to the country and had been commended therefor by more than one Chief Executive of the United States. The witness said he had sent a telegram asking for mercy and had received word that his request had been denied.

When he signed the urgent appeal, and when in his official position he circulated the official report of the convention of the A. F. of L. in Norfolk, in 1907, and of copies of the American Federation containing editorials in which were references to the boycott.

Vice-President Mitchell also availed himself of the privilege not to answer questions of counsel which called for statements made by witnesses in the original contempt proceedings. Judge Parker interposed an objection to the question, and Attorney Davenport told the witness it was his privilege not to answer if he did not desire to do so.

No Sense of Guilt.
"I considered the language of the suggestion of the committee insulting when I had been guilty of no wrong. If I had been guilty of wronging any man or woman, or the most child on earth," continued Mr. Gompers, "I would abjectly apologize and endeavor to rectify any wrong which I may have done, but conscious of the fact that my whole course has been in an effort to contend for the principles of free speech and free press, the offer of an apology—the suggestion of an apology—was an insult."

The cross-examiner then inquired if this was the only explanation the witness had in mind of his refusal to avail himself of the opportunity given by the committee to apologize.

"I have none other to make," answered Mr. Gompers.

In the course of the cross-examination of Mr. Mitchell Attorney Davenport asked the witness if in a speech he had made in the city of New York, and if I yield to no man living in loyalty to this country—that if a judge were to enjoin me from doing something that I had a legal, a constitutional, and a moral right to do, I should violate the injunction."

The witness could not recollect that he used the language mentioned, but declared the statement to be substantially as read.

Coming to the convention in Indianapolis, where the resolution to fine any member purchasing a Bucks stove was adopted, Mr. Davenport asked the witness:

Mind on Other Things.
"If the fact be that you were presiding when the committee made its report recommending the adoption of the resolution, that you put it to a vote of the convention and declared it to have been adopted, do you wish it to be understood that your several acts of participation in and assent to the resolution of unpopularity on your part of what was going on in the convention in that regard and of what you yourself were doing?"

Mr. Mitchell responded: "If the court should conclude I was presiding and performed the functions enumerated, I should ask the court to believe that I did not understand the import of the resolutions or the action of the convention."

Continuing, the witness explained that he was then in ill health and was suffering from a severe attack of the flu. He was about to retire, he said, as president of the mine workers, and contracts involving 150,000 miners were about to expire. It was his ambition, he stated, to renew these contracts and prevent a coal strike. His mind was concentrated on the solution of this problem.

Witness admitted he had not attempted in his speech to the convention a year later to notify his fellow workers that he was not conscious of the import of the resolution.

COL. W. H. STEWART, VETERAN, IS DEAD

Led Attack on Wilson's History of War Between the States.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Norfolk, Va., February 9.—Colonel William Henry Stewart, hero of the battle of The Crater, and former commander of the United Confederate Veterans, prominent as a brave soldier and historian, died to-night at his home in Portsmouth at the age of seventy-three years.

Colonel Stewart again came into prominence last summer at the annual reunion of Confederate Veterans at Newport News by his attack upon Woodrow Wilson's history of the War Between the States. The New Jersey Governor's statement that the Virginia was worsted in the battle with the Monitor was pronounced false.

"If this is the way a Virginia born historian writes her history, may God spare us from another such," said Colonel Stewart, who went on to say that he saw the battle between the Monitor and the Virginia from start to finish, and declared the Monitor retreated to shallow water and would not again give battle to the Virginia, even with the assistance of another ironclad vessel to aid her.

Colonel Stewart was former Commonwealth's attorney for Portsmouth, and held other positions of trust and honor. He was a distinguished lawyer and writer. Among his writings is a history of the battle of The Crater, and of Tidewater Virginia.
